The European Network on Statelessness (ENS) is a young and vibrant civil society alliance of over 100 non-governmental organisations, academics and individual experts in 40 countries, committed to addressing statelessness in Europe. We believe that everyone has the right to a nationality and that those who lack nationality altogether – stateless persons – are entitled to full protection of their human rights.

ANDREA, 8-YEAR-OLD STATELESS CHILD FROM ROMANIA
Among the unprecedented numbers of displaced men, women and children arriving in Europe today, there are growing numbers of stateless people. Although often overlooked, this is not surprising when you consider that statelessness is both a cause and a consequence of forced displacement.

This creates both challenges and opportunities. There is understandably broader concern that rising populism and fear of ‘the Other’ risk exacerbating a crisis of politics which renders governments unable, if not already unwilling, to adequately respond to the current situation. But equally there is now a real opportunity to pinpoint gaps and corresponding policy solutions necessary to address the specific situation of stateless persons, where there exists more political space in which to operate.

One such forum which we have successfully influenced is the recently launched European Migration Network’s Statelessness Platform – mandated by the European Council to work with the European Commission to identify and share good practice among Member States regarding the identification of stateless persons. We will continue to work closely with UNHCR and other partners to support this initiative. During 2016 Bulgaria, Greece and the Netherlands all introduced, or made progress with developing, statelessness determination procedures – advocating for which has been a major priority for us since launching our Network. Such progress is welcome, although at the same time, significant flaws in the design of all these new procedures highlight the need for continuing vigilance in our efforts to monitor developments, and to facilitate training and sharing of expertise among a wide spectrum of stakeholders. In 2017 we will bolster our capacity to do this by rolling out the pilot implementation of a comparative database on statelessness in Europe, which will build on our efforts to date.

As described in this report, our work to research, advocate, campaign and share expertise has achieved significant further progress this year – in particular to successfully shine a spotlight on the problem of childhood statelessness, and to get this issue higher up the agenda of the European Union and other key institutions.

This year has been a reminder of the value of collaboration, among our members, our partners, and across sectors. The platform provided by our #StatelessKids campaign has enabled us to successfully mobilize a new constituency of supporters, most notably to engage youth with our work. This helped us to garner over 22,000 signatures for our online petition calling on European leaders to take action. Highlighting the human impact of statelessness through the gathering of individual testimonies also remains at the heart of all our work. Embedded storytelling enables us to engage new audiences and to elevate conversations with policy-makers to achieve change. It also inspires and motivates us to re-double our efforts.

In 2017 this will include a strong focus on protecting stateless persons from arbitrary detention, the centrepiece for which will be a major conference in May where we will launch a new flagship report setting out an agenda for change and providing a platform for region-wide advocacy on this issue. We will also work on several collaborative projects – for example to more fully understanding the impact of statelessness on Roma communities, and to seek to initiate research allowing us to better analyse and address the interaction between statelessness and the refugee crisis. In all our efforts, we will be emboldened by being able to rely on our recently expanded Secretariat, the active contribution of our growing membership and the increased engagement by our widening supporter base.

Thank you for your ongoing support.

Chris Nash, Director
UNDERSTANDING AND ADDRESSING STATELESSNESS

Among the millions of stateless people worldwide it is estimated that there are more than 600,000 in Europe alone.

Although many European states have ratified the relevant international instruments, they lack effective national frameworks to deal with statelessness. This has left many individuals vulnerable to discrimination and human rights abuse.

Stateless people face numerous difficulties in their daily lives: they can lack access to health care, education, employment, property rights and the ability to move freely across borders, leaving many destitute and abandoned on the margins of their societies. It may be impossible to get married, open a bank account or get a driving license – many of the things that most people take for granted.

While statelessness occurs for a variety of reasons – discrimination against minority groups, issues regarding state succession, conflicts of laws between states, or even deliberate policies by states to deny or strip people of nationality – it is essential that Europe recognises and addresses this issue if it is to uphold its traditions of freedom, democracy, equality, the rule of law and respect for human rights.

In a remarkably short space of time, ENS has mobilized a wide array of civil society actors, to work collaboratively to address statelessness in Europe. Harnessing the diversity of expertise and the impressive reach of the network’s members, ENS has succeeded in translating research into advocacy tools and actions aimed at achieving change.

LAURA VAN WAAS, CO-DIRECTOR AT THE INSTITUTE ON STATELESSNESS AND INCLUSION

WHO WE ARE AND HOW WE WORK

Statelessness is a major human rights problem in Europe, yet for far too long it was ignored, with relatively little known about its causes, consequences and who it affects.

The European Network on Statelessness (ENS) is a young and vibrant civil society alliance of over 100 non-governmental organisations, academics and individual experts in 40 countries, committed to addressing statelessness in Europe. We believe that everyone has the right to a nationality and that those who lack nationality altogether – stateless persons – are entitled to full protection of their human rights.

ENS was founded to act as a coordinating body and expert resource for organisations working to end statelessness in Europe. At the heart of our strategy has been an understanding of the need to mainstream and raise awareness about statelessness and nationality issues, to build the capacity of civil society to take action, and to act as an effective catalyst for change.

During 2016 we’ve further increased our profile and impact, leading civil society efforts to address statelessness in Europe and translating this into protection for those affected. We remain dedicated to strengthening the often unheard voices of stateless men, women and children in Europe.

Our thematic priorities include children – ending childhood statelessness, access to justice – protecting stateless people from arbitrary detention, forced displacement – adopting comprehensive systems that protect and regularise stateless migrants and anti-discrimination – preventing statelessness among minority populations.
OUR THEORY OF CHANGE

CAPACITY BUILDING

Although numerous organisations have a mandate to address statelessness, few possess the specialist knowledge to tackle the root causes. We provide training and a forum for the exchange of information and good practice. Our specialist pool of trainers and experts implements our Europe Wide Training Programme to build capacity among civil society partners, policy makers and other key stakeholders.

AWARENESS-RAISING

Despite increased awareness, statelessness remains relatively poorly understood. We aim to give a human face to the issue. Our weekly blog and quarterly newsletter provide opinion and analysis of developments to a readership of thousands. Our research and policy work generates widespread media coverage and we run targeted campaigns to support our advocacy.

LAW & POLICY DEVELOPMENT

Our goal is to ensure full respect for the rights of stateless people through evidence-based advocacy. We commission and publish research so the issue is fully understood and effective policy solutions implemented. Additionally, our litigation working group brings about change through the targeted use of strategic litigation.

STRATEGIES

- Capacity building
- Awareness raising
- Law & policy development

DIRECT OUTPUTS

- New research into causes and effects of statelessness
- Policy monitoring and legal analysis
- Pan-European campaigns to raise awareness and coordinate action
- Media coverage by working with key news outlets
- Training programme for NGOs, lawyers and decision makers
- National-level advocacy programme to advance protection
- Litigation strategy targeting non-compliance with international obligations

DESIRED OUTCOMES

- States commit and work to eradicate statelessness
- Improvement in national laws and introduction of statelessness determination procedures
- Stateless people are empowered and heard
- More stateless people receive protection
- A growing community is aware and concerned about statelessness
- Lawyers and NGOs are trained, use protection mechanisms, and hold governments to account

DESIRED IMPACTS

- Statelessness is widely understood as a human rights violation
- Stateless persons are empowered and have equal access to rights
- States have safeguards to prevent new cases and procedures to identify and protect stateless people
- States commit to work towards global eradication of statelessness
PROTECTING STATELESS PERSONS FROM ARBITRARY DETENTION

Across Europe a failure by states to put in place effective systems to identify stateless people leaves thousands exposed to repeated and indefinite detention. In 2016, working with its members as part of a three-year project, ENS published new research mapping the scope and use of immigration detention in Ukraine, the UK and Bulgaria. The reports from the UK and Bulgaria received extensive media coverage and all three country partners organised dissemination events targeting lawyers, civil society organisations, government representatives and other stakeholders. The research conducted over the course of the project will inform a new Agenda for Change to be published in 2017 calling for concerted regional advocacy to protect stateless people from arbitrary detention.

HELPING TO SHAPE THE EU RESPONSE TO STATELESSNESS

Following the adoption of the first ever Conclusions on Statelessness by the European Council in December 2015, we have carried out a concerted engagement with the European Commission and the European Migration Network (EMN), tasked with taking forward the Conclusions. We presented at an EMN statelessness conference in Luxembourg in April 2016 and a closed meeting of Permanent Representatives in October 2016. We held bilateral meetings with the Slovakian Presidency of the EU, and issued a public statement to Slovakia and Malta ahead of their respective EU Presidencies.

ENS members continue to engage in advocacy with the EMN and national governments across Europe. ENS has also spoken at various high profile events, including the annual EU Forum on the Rights of the Child in Brussels in November. The influential LIBE Committee of the European Parliament has been persuaded to hold a dedicated hearing on statelessness in 2017, influenced by online petitions submitted by ENS.

BUILDING CAPACITY AND SHARING OUR EXPERTISE

ENS has continued to develop its Europe Wide Training Programme (EWTP) in partnership with members, supporting the roll-out of training for lawyers, NGOs and government decision-makers in Albania, Poland and the Netherlands. This capacity-building work has reinforced national-level advocacy towards the introduction of dedicated statelessness protection mechanisms and has equipped lawyers to directly uphold the human rights of stateless persons.

In September, ENS held a three-day advanced training workshop and planning meeting in Budapest for our Advisory Committee members. The meeting was followed by a conference on managing and identifying statelessness organised by the European Migration Network and supported by ENS.

We are regularly invited to share our expertise with both governmental and inter-governmental partners. This year; ENS presented at events in Borjomi, Brussels, Bucharest, Budapest, Geneva, London, Santiago, Sofia and Strasbourg.
Advocating Through UN Human Rights Mechanisms

Statelessness is fundamentally a human rights issue and one of the ways in which we seek to tackle it is through advocacy and engagement with human rights mechanisms. In partnership with the Institute on Statelessness and Inclusion and our national members, we have made submissions this year to the UN’s Universal Periodic Review process on the United Kingdom and the Netherlands, as well as to the Committee on the Rights of the Child on Serbia and Estonia.

Supporting an Emerging Global Civil Society Coalition to End Statelessness

Throughout 2016, we continued to take strategic advantage of the profile and media interest generated through UNHCR’s #IBelong campaign which seeks to eradicate statelessness within a decade. ENS is coordinating European civil society’s contribution to the campaign.

We have continued to share our experience with other developing regional networks, including at a global NGO statelessness retreat in Geneva in June 2016. We also arranged a bilateral meeting with UNHCR Assistant High Commissioner Volker Turk to discuss key concerns and strategies, also attended by representatives from other regional networks.

Statelessness and Minority Groups in Europe

In July, we staged a two-day workshop in Belgrade to kick off an exciting new joint project with the European Roma Rights Centre and the Institute on Statelessness and Inclusion. The project aims to strengthen the understanding, attitudes and capacity of Roma rights organisations and activists to effectively mobilise to end Roma statelessness. Research findings will be published in 2017 as a platform for concerted advocacy aimed at achieving improved regional and national responses.

Litigating for Change

Another key component of our law and policy work in 2016 has been the continued development and implementation of a three-year strategic litigation strategy, including through a dedicated working group. In January, ENS launched a challenge in the Serbian Constitutional Court to contest barriers to birth registration in partnership with the European Roma Rights Centre and Praxis Serbia. Working to prevent statelessness through improved access to birth registration is a key component of our #StatelessKids campaign.

In July, ENS convened a dedicated litigation training workshop for 15 members. We also provided funding to members in Bulgaria and the Netherlands to identify and develop an ‘incubator’ of cases suitable for strategic litigation with a focus on arbitrary detention.

If we are to achieve our common goals to tackle statelessness in Europe it is vital that ENS and UNHCR continue their strong collaboration. It is a model that has already helped inspire the creation of regional networks elsewhere as part of an emerging global coalition helping us deliver on the #IBelong Campaign to end statelessness in 10 years.

#STATELESSKIDS – CAMPAIGNING TO END CHILDHOOD STATELESSNESS IN EUROPE

Thousands of children in Europe are growing up without a nationality. For those affected this can mean missing out on healthcare, education and other opportunities. It brings hardship and anguish to children and their parents alike. No child should be left without a nationality. It is a problem that is entirely solvable, yet over half of European countries don’t have necessary safeguards in place to protect children from statelessness.

In 2016, ENS launched our #StatelessKids campaign calling on European countries to end childhood statelessness once and for all. A key component of this was an online petition, launched in June on the WeMove campaigning platform. The petition was translated into nine languages, and received over 22,000 signatures in under six months.

A dedicated #StatelessKids website (www.statelesskids.eu) provides resources and information on the issue including a short campaign video and three visual explainers.

Following advocacy efforts, including by UNHCR and our members the Norwegian Association for Asylum Seekers (NOAS) and the Institute on Statelessness and Inclusion, Norway issued a new instruction aligning citizenship practice with international law – taking an important step towards ensuring that no child born in Norway remains stateless.

We came to Brussels to advocate on behalf of the weakest members of our societies. Most of them are invisible, but that doesn’t mean they don’t exist. They can’t speak for themselves, so it’s time we do it on their behalf.

JESSICA KLASSEN, ENS YOUTH AMBASSADOR

Brussels, July 2016 – ENS youth ambassadors met with a delegation of Parliamentarians calling for action to end childhood statelessness
#STATELESSKIDS YOUTH CONGRESS

In July, 35 youth ambassadors from across Europe joined ENS members in Brussels for three days of training, strategy development and planning on how to eradicate childhood statelessness.

The energy and commitment of youth ambassadors to tackle statelessness was truly inspiring, and as one of them wrote afterwards “this was one of the liveliest, most engaged and energetic conferences I’ve been to […] giving us the tools to engage the public and policy on the issue”.

The congress culminated in an event in the European Parliament where the youth ambassadors met with a delegation of Parliamentarians to call for action and discuss ways to end childhood statelessness.

One of the youth ambassadors who spoke at the Parliament was Mazen, a stateless Palestinian from Syria, who told of the hardship and struggles brought on by growing up without a nationality. Mazen now lives in Cyprus where he has finally found a home and a sense of belonging, and is working to help other people seeking protection.

Following the congress, ENS worked together with members and youth ambassadors in seven priority countries to implement a range of activities designed to raise awareness and influence national stakeholders.

HANDING OVER THE #STATELESSKIDS PETITION

In November at an event in the European Parliament, we handed over the #StatelessKids petition with over 22,000 signatures to the Council of Europe and the EU Parliament. More than 15 members of parliament came out to support the campaign and to commit to working with us to end childhood statelessness. The event was also attended by several key stakeholders from the Council of Europe, and included an address by Nils Muižnieks, Council of Europe Commissioner for Human Rights.

To mark the occasion across Europe satellite events were also held by our members in Italy, Poland, Slovenia, France, United Kingdom, Albania, Macedonia and Serbia, amplifying our collective voice.

Brussels, July 2016 – youth ambassadors and ENS members from 17 different countries came to a three-day conference to discuss the role of young people in ending statelessness

Strasbourg, November 2016 – ENS youth ambassador, Claudia Bensimhon, presented the #StatelessKids petition to Cecilia Wikström, Chair of the EU Petitions Committee, and Manlio di Stefano, Member of the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe
ENS members and youth ambassadors have organised a range of activities around Europe in support of the campaign: teaching in schools, exhibitions, meetings, influencing national stakeholders, producing videos and information campaigns, and building new alliances to continue their work into 2017.

#STATELESSKIDS AROUND EUROPE

ENS members and youth ambassadors have organised a range of activities around Europe in support of the campaign: teaching in schools, exhibitions, meetings, influencing national stakeholders, producing videos and information campaigns, and building new alliances to continue their work into 2017.

#STATELESSKIDS IN SLOVENIA

Our Slovenian member, The Peace Institute, and youth ambassadors showed that innovation is key when speaking about statelessness to new audiences. They developed a short documentary, which was screened at universities and as a part of a film festival. They’ve also designed a card game to get people talking about statelessness.

#STATELESSKIDS IN SERBIA

In Serbia we worked in partnership with our member, Praxis, and youth ambassadors to raise awareness in secondary schools and local youth clubs and to promote measures to ensure that children can realise their right to a nationality through stakeholder meetings.

#STATELESSKIDS IN MACEDONIA

Our member, Macedonian Young Lawyers Association (MYLA) and youth ambassadors went to local secondary schools to talk about statelessness as part of their awareness raising. They also put on a photography exhibition and made a short video, which was aired on TV stations as part of a UNHCR project.

#STATELESSKIDS IN POLAND

In Poland, our partner Halina Niec Legal Aid Center went to schools to talk to students about childhood statelessness and what it means to live without a nationality.

This is a message from a postcard written by a 15-year old Polish student to the country’s President as part of the #StatelessKids campaign.
Dear Mr President,

There are many stateless people living in Poland. They have no chance of a normal life, they cannot access higher education or even rent an apartment. Did you know about this? I didn’t. Now that I do, I would like to ask you to make Poland sign the 1954 Convention Relating to the Status of Stateless Persons.

Sincerely, Barłomiej

We wanted young people to be aware that children at risk of statelessness exist in their close surroundings, that they probably see them on the streets and maybe even know some of them.

DIJANA AND IVANA, ENS YOUTH AMBASSADORS IN SERBIA

"We are not invisible, they live with us! Let’s root out statelessness!"

"What does citizenship mean to you?"

"Are there people without citizenship?"

Dear Mr President,

There are many stateless people living in Poland. They have no chance of a normal life, they cannot access higher education or even rent an apartment. Did you know about this? I didn’t. Now that I do, I would like to ask you to make Poland sign the 1954 Convention Relating to the Status of Stateless Persons.

Sincerely, Barłomiej
ENS has a small but dedicated secretariat based at our London office, tasked with coordination and development of the Network. We operate a controlled growth and engagement strategy by maintaining an agile structure and a philosophy of building capacity and, wherever possible, channelling resources through our members across 40 European countries.

STAFF

Chris Nash, Director: Chris is the Director and co-founder of ENS. He has worked in the refugee and migration field for 19 years, initially as an asylum lawyer and then at the European Council on Refugees and Exiles (Head of Policy & Advocacy), the Refugee Council of Australia (National Policy Director), Amnesty International (Head of Refugee & Migrant Rights Team) and Asylum Aid (International Protection Policy Coordinator). He is a sought after speaker and has written widely on asylum, migration and statelessness.

Nina Murray – Research and Policy Coordinator: Nina joined ENS in March 2017. She holds a masters degree in Migration Studies and a BA in Modern Iberian and Latin American Regional Studies. She previously worked at the Scottish Refugee Council for over six years, and has extensive experience undertaking and leading research, policy development and advocacy with a focus on gender and refugee rights. She has also worked as a researcher at What Works Scotland, based at the University of Glasgow, and in a range of other professional and voluntary roles in the human rights field.

Jan Brulc – Head of Communications: Jan joined ENS in November 2015 to run its communications and advocacy work. He holds a Masters degree in politics. Previously, Jan worked for the Migrants’ Rights Network and the European Council on Refugees and Exiles, managing communications work from their London and Brussels offices. He also worked as a lead web developer at Small Axe and in the media department at the European Medicine Agency.

Elizabeth Odette – Operations Manager: Elizabeth joined ENS in November 2015 as operations manager responsible for managing HR, finance, governance and administration. Before joining ENS Elizabeth worked in a broad range of finance and business administration roles in the charity sector for over 10 years. Her interests include working with young people in various projects with which she is involved.

OUR VOLUNTEERS

We owe a big thank you to the tireless work of our youth ambassadors and volunteers who’ve contributed their time, energy and creativity to the #StatelessKids campaign in 2016 and who we look forward to working with in the future.

BOARD OF TRUSTEES

ENS has an active Board of Trustees currently made up of six members, responsible for overseeing the governance of the charity. They are:

Stateless persons should not be denied their fundamental rights. ENS has filled a void in terms of previous limited civil society action on statelessness and I have witnessed first-hand their instrumental role in pushing this issue higher up the agenda. This helps us to maintain a strong focus on tackling the problem.
